

Sleepy Hollow may pay price for earthquake safety at dam

By KIRSTIE WILDE

ADELE MARGOLIS likes Sleepy Hollow just the way it is: very small, very upscale and most of all — sleepy. But she and her neighbors are aghast at news that they will have to endure two years of dusty, noisy gravel trucks rumbling right through their neighborhood, so the rest of the valley can be safe if an earthquake ruptures the San Clemente Dam.

The State of California ordered California-American Water Co. to seismically retrofit the dam almost 10 years ago. The Draft Environmental Impact Report for the project is being circulated to governmental agencies for comment right now, and the document will be released to the public

Raccoon army marches in

■ Resident shocked, bedroom destroyed

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE GROWING concern about an overpopulation of raccoons on the Monterey Peninsula hit home for Carmel piano teacher Sally Magee on Nov. 13. At 9 p.m. she heard a commotion coming from an upstairs bedroom and was horrified by what she saw when she opened the door.

"There were these huge raccoons on the shelves, in the closet, on the furniture. They had clawed through the ceiling, ripped down the curtains, toppled my books and three of them were curled up on my gold lamé dress." She slammed the door and called Carmel police — it wasn't until hours later that she was astounded to learn that there had been 11 full-grown raccoons in the room, literally destroying the place. Priceless mementos from Magee's career as a pianist, including posters about her performances, were shredded by the animals.

$500 taken in armed robbery at Carmel's Crystal Terrace Inn

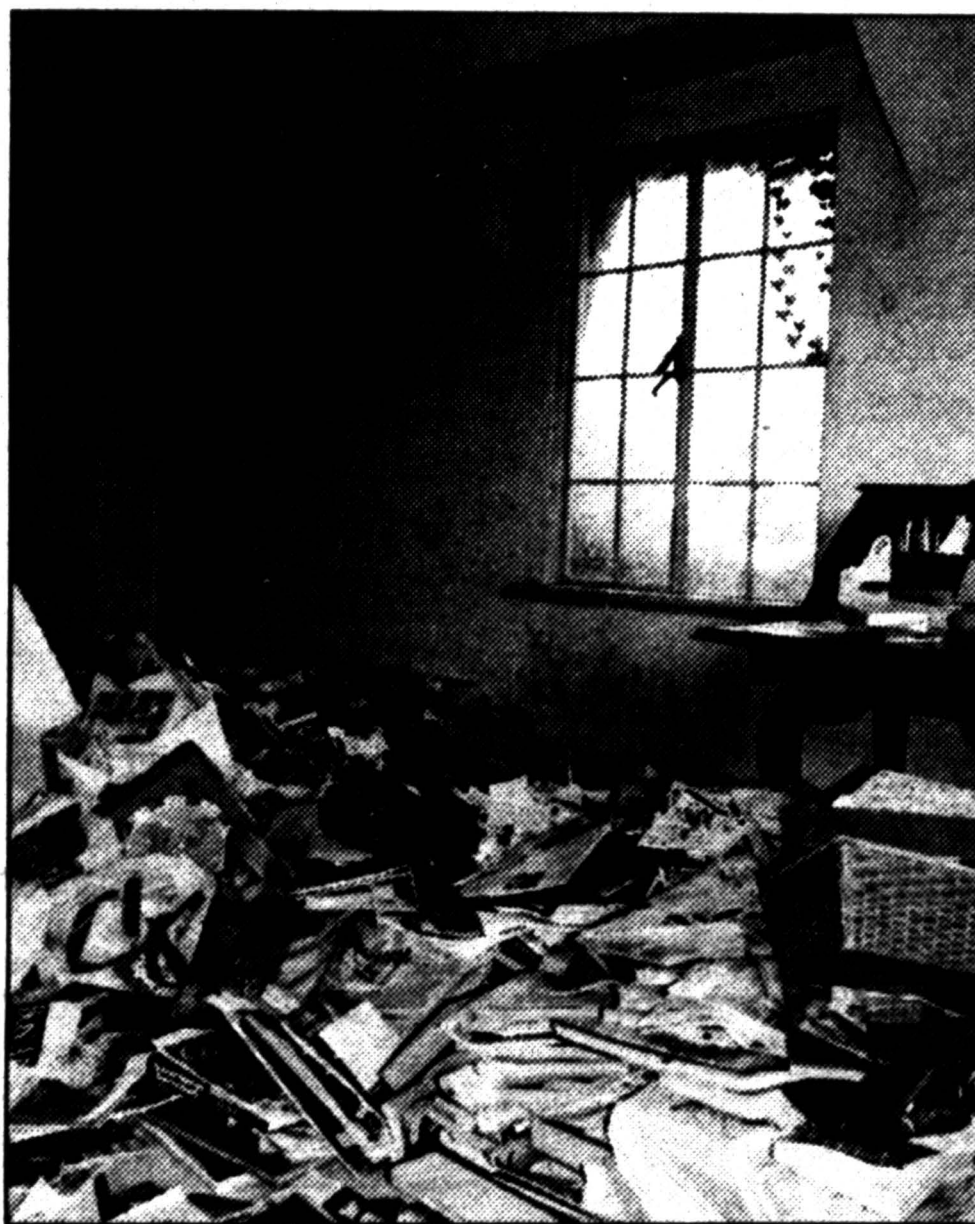

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A MASKED man reportedly held up the desk clerk at the Crystal Terrace Inn at gunpoint, taking $500 in cash at 8:46 p.m. on November 18.

The desk clerk was alone in the lobby of the bed and breakfast on Carpenter Street and Valley Way when the suspect holding a handgun walked in and demanded money, according to the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

The clerk opened up the cash drawer and the suspect "reached in and grabbed everything he could get," said Sgt. John DiCarlo.

Water district seeks 'death penalty' for H₂O cheaters

By PAUL MILLER

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District has added a surprising new provision to many permits for remodels and additions in Carmel and surrounding communities — a provision that puts homeowners on notice that their entire water supply can be taken away if they are ever caught with an illegal water fixture.

The document, which is upsetting some permit applicants who have been told they have to sign it, also provides that "any individual customer of the California American Water Company" can seek to have a neighbor's water permanently shut off, even for something minor like having the wrong washing machine in their house.

Water district General Manager Darby Fuerst said the provision is just for "extreme cases — for example, when someone with an illegal fixture refuses to remove it." But documents examined by The Pine Cone contained no limitation on when the penalty could be imposed.

Attorney for the water district, David Laredo, agreed that the punishment may seem harsh, but said water customers would be protected by the courts against capricious application of the shut-off penalty. "The only person who can actually cut off someone's water is a judge," he said.

IF THE SHOE FITS...

A rewed-up Carmel High squad claimed 'The Shoe' on Nov. 14 as the Padres stomped Pacific Grove 35-7. Leading the charge were quarterback Nason Campbell, who completed 12 passes for 164 yards, and running back Chris Paquin, who tallied 58 yards rushing. The CHS defense helped out by forcing three interceptions and recovering two Breaker fumbles. The win raised the Padres' Mission Trail Athletic League record to 3-2 (4-5 overall) and capped a three-game winning streak, but coach Dave Stainbrook and his squad were still kept out of the Central Coast Section playoffs.

Mentally ill woman calls in false alarm to sheriff, then risks her own life

By TAMARA GRIPPI

SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES went on a wild ride Nov. 11, rushing 50 miles to help a woman who said her son was going to commit suicide in Big Sur.

When they arrived, they learned she had invented the emergency and that she was the one who nearly killed herself by lying down in the middle of Highway 1, according to Deputy Neil Shaw. The Monterey County District Attorney's office charged Eileen Jane Arthur, a transient in the area, with blocking a roadway and possession of less than one ounce of marijuana, which was reportedly found in her pocket.

At 9:16 p.m., Arthur reportedly called the sheriff's department from a pay phone at Lucia Lodge, claiming that her son was going to take his own life. She hung up before giving her name or any specifics, according to Shaw.

While deputies were rushing "Code 3" — with lights flashing and sirens wailing, down to Big Sur — a man called the sheriff and reported that Arthur was lying in the middle of Highway 1 in front of Lucia Lodge. At least one car had to swerve to avoid hitting Arthur before Arthur could be convinced to get out of harm's way, Shaw said.

The deputies who talked to Arthur said there was no plausible explanation for her behavior, except that she is suffering from mental illness. Shaw later contacted Arthur's son in Carmel, who told deputies that he was fine and he didn't know why his mother would make up a story about him.

Shaw said the drastic nature of the false alarm really gave the deputies no choice but to arrest Arthur. "Bogus calls cause so many problems," he said.

Food and shelter

Arthur didn't resist when the deputies took her into custody. "She was happy when we showed up," Shaw said. "The first thing she said to us was, 'Can I get in your car? It's warm in there.'"

Arthur will be able to receive psychiatric treatment at Monterey County Jail, Shaw said. "She's not going to be able to hurt herself," he said. "She'll get food. She'll be warm. That's not why we put her there — she committed violations. But under the circumstances, that's a nice break for her."

Mentally ill homeless people who are in danger of hurting themselves can receive treatment at local hospitals, but space limitations often require them to be released after 72 hours, Shaw said.

Arthur has been taken to various hospitals in the past, Shaw said.

Carmel man works to help Honduran orphans

By KIRSTIE WILDE

RON PINKSTON, the Carmel man recuperating from injuries he suffered in a spectacular crane accident on Rocky Creek Bridge last summer, has now thrown all his energies into aiding victims of Hurricane Mitch in Pinkston's adopted country of Honduras.

Pinkston's wife is Honduran, and for years he has divided his time between earning money at construction jobs in the Carmel area and running several businesses in Honduras. When the crane he was operating toppled off that Big Sur bridge August 18, crushing both Pinkston's legs and leaving him dangling for nearly three hours before he could be rescued, his simple money-making construction job turned into a two-month hospital stay. He was recuperating, wheelchair-bound, at his home on the Odello Ranch in Carmel when Hurricane Mitch tore through Honduras in early November killing at least 10,000 people. It also destroyed Pinkston's house.

Now he's spending virtually all his time (outside of therapy for his legs) in front of his computer, communicating with friends and family in Honduras. He's trying to get aid to the hardest-hit victims of the hurricane — the orphans.

"We support an orphanage for 40 little girls on the coast, which was a 3-hour drive from my house even in normal times," Pinkston told The Pine Cone. "Now you can't get there at all; communication is completely cut off. I've contacted every relief effort and nobody knows if the girls are even alive."

Pinkston says that the U.S. military has already sent a lot of relief supplies through an American base in Honduras and that the Navy Seabees are rebuilding some of the important roads. But whole sections of the mainland were inundated by water and mud and Pinkston says at least 300 small communities haven't even been contacted. He believes the last to be helped will probably be the village children whose parents were killed in the six-day storm.

"If there are 10,000 to 15,000 dead, how many new orphans will there be?" he asked. "There is no organization that just concentrates on getting food, shelter and medicine to the orphans, and I'm hoping to do it."

It's a daunting task for a man who is still hobbling around on crutches, but Pinkston — who talks a mile-a-minute and has a new idea with every sentence — is certainly not short of enthusiasm.

Pinkston has already arranged for some medical supplies to be flown into the country, and has set up an entity to accept donations. (He said he was able to affiliate with an existing 501c3 non-profit corporation called Relief Now International run by Dr. Jack Faia, the local dentist who has been active in previous Central America relief efforts.) Pinkston plans to drive a 4-wheel drive vehicle to Honduras with supplies for his orphanage on December 15, and has convinced a friend in Alaska to loan his bush plane for a flight to the isolated eastern coast of Honduras in January.

Caltrans schedules freeway hearing Nov. 24

CALTRANS will hold a public hearing on the supplemental EIR for the proposed Hatton Canyon Scenic Highway at 4 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 24, at Carmel Middle School. The supplemental EIR was prepared by Caltrans after a judge ruled July 22 that the original EIR failed to adequately analyze "cumulative impacts" which the proposed freeway might have.

Caltrans says the judge's concerns should be satisfied by the updated information about the freeway's impacts contained in the supplemental EIR. Gary Ruggerone, lead environmental planner for Caltrans, says that the second half of the new report satisfies concerns about the red-legged frog, steelhead fish, wetlands, noise and sound walls, air quality, pine pitch canker disease, population growth and potential for flooding, among others.

But freeway opponents have called the new EIR inadequate and have hired several of their own experts to repudiate Caltrans' assertions at the meeting Nov. 24.

"I have horses down there to pack the supplies in," he said. "I hope people around Carmel will help me with donations."

Pinkston's "wish list" includes:

- Small, 4-wheel all-terrain vehicles which can be used to transport supplies in rugged areas and along sandy beaches

- Tents and camping gear. "Anything it takes to operate in the bush," says Pinkston.

- Private pilots willing to donate their time and their planes

- Small, inflatable boats with motors

- Stuffed toys for the children

- Cash

Pinkston is consumed right now with the emergency relief effort for the children in Honduras, but his number one wish is even more ambitious. He hopes to set up an adoption network to allow the youngest orphans to be embraced by families in the United States. He said he is talking with people in Congressman Sam Farr's office about ways to cut the red tape and allow Americans to more easily adopt Honduran orphans who are younger than age four.

"There are so many children there who truly have no one. And I know there are families here who would welcome them into their families if they only knew how to do it," he said.

Anyone wishing to make a donation, provide manpower or to get more information about Rescue Network International can call Ron Pinkston at 622-0473 or write Box 22736, Carmel, CA 93922.

during the week of December 10.

In order to "get out in front of the EIR," Cal-Am's new general manager, Judy Almond, went to the Sleepy Hollow Homeowners' Association annual meeting earlier this month to explain the project. She told them that Cal-Am has mandated the project; it has to go forward; Cal-Am doesn't have an option to ignore a dam that is not earthquake-safe. She and project manager Marc Lucca gave residents the bad news:

■ Start date is during the year 2000, when trucks will bring gravel through Sleepy Hollow to improve the Cal-Am access road which connects the subdivision to the San Clemente Dam. The phase 1 road project will take about five months.

■ After the winter rains are finished, Phase 2 of the project in 2001 will really rattle the windows in Sleepy Hollow. One gravel truck every hour, five days a week for another five months will deliver crushed rock to the dam.

Lucca told The Pine Cone that when he started researching the logistics of the seismic retrofit of the dam, he said "Under no circumstances do I want to drive through Sleepy Hollow."

He had an alternative: an existing road that roughly parallels the Sleepy Hollow road, but which does not connect directly to Carmel Valley Road. So why not just extend that road the 500 feet necessary to provide construction access to the dam?

"We found sensitive plant species and potentially significant cultural resources (in an area known to be important to the Esselen Indians)," Lucca said. The EIR said the "preferred alternative" is therefore the slender road through Sleepy Hollow.

Margolis wonders why plants and artifacts are more important than the children in her neighborhood.

"We can't believe they are going to send gravel trucks, as many as one every hour for six months, down our little one-lane road!" Margolis told The Pine Cone. She explained that the private road has blind curves and is so narrow in places that a car meeting a gravel truck would have to back down the lane to let it pass.

"Not to mention a pedestrian or me with my baby in a stroller," she said, "We'd have to jump out of the way. We have no sidewalks and there is not room for a gravel truck and a car to comfortably pass on the tiny bridge over Tularcitos Creek in the subdivision."

Margolis, an attorney, is trying to find out if Cal-Am's easement over the Sleepy Hollow road can be challenged legally.

The San Clemente Dam, created in 1921, provides very limited water storage today. The original capacity of 1,500 acre-feet of water has been reduced by 1,350 acre-feet of sand and gravel that has built up behind the dam over the years. But eliminating the dam is not an option, even if Cal-Am wanted to do it, according to Lucca.

"We cannot allow the massive amount of sediment to migrate down the river, because it would harm endangered species," he explained. "And if we tried to dredge and remove the sediment by truck it would take at least three years — causing far greater traffic disruption — and cost a whole lot more."

The seismic retrofit project is projected to cost between $13 million and $14 million, according to Lucca.

RACCOONS

Favorite clothes were ripped and stained as the raccoons climbed up to get to the top shelves in the closet. Her book collection was strewn two-feet-deep across the entire room.

The Carmel Fire Department ended up climbing a ladder to the second-story balcony and broke a window to provide the raccoons an exit. Later, after the tenth animal crawled out the window, firemen barricaded the window and left.

At 1 a.m. Magee heard a loud thump and discovered another raccoon, "nearly 3-feet-long from nose to tail" had dropped down into the bedroom. The intrepid firemen returned, opened the exit, and the last of the varmints ambled off into the dark.

"I suppose they've moved into somebody else's house by now," observed Magee.

A big mistake

Ironically, it was an effort to fortify her home against raccoons that backfired on Magee. Just the day before, she had hired a local contractor to fix a hole in the roof. The roofers looked around in the crawl space, but obviously didn't look hard enough before they repaired the hole.

According to wildlife specialist Laurie Frazer, there are few animals more aggressive than a trapped raccoon. She has seen them actually claw through subflooring and through fiberglass bathtubs. She warns every homeowner to make absolutely sure there are no raccoons trapped inside their homes when they repair vent screens or other access points.

Magee was astonished to think that a herd of 11 adult raccoons had made a home in her attic crawl space. She wonders what might have happened if the animals had invaded another bedroom in the house, occupied by Magee's 92-year old mother, who is deaf.

"I truly believe it would have killed her," said Magee.

Growing problem in Carmel

Carmel Mayor Ken White personally inspected the damage the next day, and advised Magee to prune bushes and trees, and attend to other places that could allow raccoon access to her home. White told The Pine Cone that he found and cleaned up a raccoon latrine in his own backyard last week. He and City Administrator Jere Kersnar are working to set up a town meeting with the county health department, animal control specialists and other experts, to try to figure out what the city should do — if anything — about the raccoons.

Kersnar said the most important thing citizens can do right now is to barricade their crawl spaces, roofs and decks against the animals and stop feeding them.

"Carmel's law is clear," he said. "It is an infraction to feed a raccoon and the fine is $100 for the first violation, $200 for the second and $500 for the third within a six-month period."

He said the raccoons are "causing a lot of stress among residents" and complaints are mounting.

Donna Smith, manager of the Lamplighter Inn, called The Pine Cone to report that eight raccoons were spotted outside one of her guest cottages last Sunday night. She's worried that the animals could hurt business. Terry Zanetta reported a "sick, bleeding raccoon" crawled into The Secret Garden shop in broad daylight. "I just hid behind the counter until he left," she said. Her employer, Lee Goodenough, said she is concerned about liability if a customer should be injured by a diseased animal.

In Pacific Grove Wednesday, an Alder St. resident tried to rescue her Boston terrier from a raccoon that was mauling the dog. She was bitten and received several puncture wounds from the raccoon before it ran away. Since the animal escaped, the woman was advised to take a series of rabies shots. She declined, worried that the shots would be worse than the slight risk of rabies because she is already undergoing

Highlands but who did not want to be identified, called the provision the equivalent of the "death penalty" for a homeowner.

"If all your water is shut off you obviously can't live in your home, you can't sell it, you can't do anything," said the man, who has a permit pending to add a bathroom to his home. He worries that a home with such a document in its chain of title would be harder to sell, and he wondered if banks would approve a mortgage for it.

When water is scarce

With no new water available for additions in most of the Cal-Am service area, water district regulations permit homeowners to add a bathroom or sink only if they cut water use in the rest of their home by a corresponding amount.

The shut-off penalty is part of a standard, legally binding document which the water district is now requiring homeowners to sign and have recorded at the courthouse in Salinas — before they are issued their permit to build.

"We are trying to make sure that the water-saving measures that the homeowner promises to put in place are permanently maintained," Fuerst said, because the area's water shortage is likely to be permanent as well.

A typical document spells out exactly how many water fixtures the homeowner is permitted to have, including toilets, sinks, kitchen sinks, utility sinks, washing machines, standard bathtubs, oversize tubs, shower stalls, etc.

The document usually also specifies that the home being remodeled must have an "ultra-low-flow dishwasher, manufactured with no wash cycle capable of using greater than 7.66 gallons of water, and one ultra-low-flow washing machine, manufactured with no wash cycle capable of using greater than 18 gallons of water."

If any of these limits is exceeded, the typical document continues, "all water use on the site may thereafter be revoked . . . Such revocation would cause the irrevocable extinction of any right or entitlement to water use, water use capacity, or water credit for the subject property."

The penalty could apply even if the only violation was that the "ultra-low-flow" dishwasher or washing machine was replaced with a standard capacity model, said legal experts who reviewed the documents for The Pine Cone.

A fine of $250 per day can also be imposed when a homeowner illegally increases water use at their home, the document says.

Anyone can enforce

People who have been told they must sign such a document point to another clause as the one most troubling to them — a clause that says the document is enforceable not only by the water district itself, but also "by any individual customer of the California-American Water Company, or any individual customer of any entity which is a successor to the California-American Water Company."

"I might be willing to believe that the water district itself will be reasonable in enforcing the terms of the document," one homeowner says, "but for some reason they want to make it possible for any nut to try to cut somebody's water off, just for adding a bar sink or something."

"Someone who wants to enforce the shut-off provision will have to go to court anyway," Laredo said, "and this language takes the water board out of the position of having to filter those complaints before they get to court."

Laredo says any debate over the fairness of permanently cutting off someone's water for putting in an illegal sink or dishwasher should have taken place back in 1980 when the water board adopted a rule giving it the power to take away someone's water for breaking the rules.

"It would be unfair to leave the language [about losing all your water] out of the notice because then people would not be fairly warned," Laredo said.

He also said he would be "hard-pressed" to think of a circumstance when the complete shut-off of someone's water would be necessary. "If you receive notice of a violation, you're going to try to cure it by getting a permit or you're going to get rid of the illegal fixture," he said.

Deputy Dennis English checks dense brush at the corner of 2nd and Carpenter, looking for clues that might have been left by the robber.

ROBBERY

The robber ordered the woman to get down on the floor before he fled the scene, DiCarlo said.

Nobody heard a car pull away, but Michael Maryk, who lives on Second Ave. near Carpenter, heard a loud thump against his front door right around the same time the robbery was reported to the sheriff.

When Maryk heard the thud, which sounded like "a body slamming against the door," Maryk pounded on his side of the door, "just to let them know a big powerful man was on the other side who was scared silly."

Maryk, who went to call the sheriff, didn't open his door or catch a glimpse of anyone suspicious.

Deputies searched Maryk's yard and nearby shrubbery the following morning, but turned up nothing. The sheriff's department is investigating the possibility that the robber could have been hiding beneath the shrubs just outside Maryk's front door after the robbery.

It's also possible that the masked robber had a car parked around the corner or down the street from the inn, DiCarlo said.

The suspect is described as a male, 20- to 30-years old, possibly an African-American, 6 feet tall and 150 pounds. He was dressed in black clothes, wore a mask over his face and carried a black bag.

Sandy Claws

YET ANOTHER Australian shepherd is herdless in Carmel — but 18-month-old Maja Maslowska doesn't let her deprived state get her down at all. She smiles all the time and takes advantage of any real or perceived herding possibility.

Take, for example, the family hamster, Nusia, who is taken from her cage for daily exercise on the Maslowska family coffee table. Maja circles the table as Nusia is strolling about on the table top and nudges the furry hamster away from the table's edge, staving off a possible crippling fall.

When they are walking anywhere, Mom Agata and six-year-old sister Malwina are also among those so honored for herding. Maja circles them, and if either crosses an imaginary line that only she perceives, she tries to prod them gently back into line. Man may work from sun to sun, but a shepherd's work is never done.

This week on Carmel Beach, while the bright morning sun was casting long shadows in the sand, Maja was awhirl in beach dog activities, even being so provocative as to swipe Shawni Segale's Frisbee to take for a long run at water's edge.

Until she was six months old, Maja used a lot of her puppy vim digging holes twice her size in the back garden, much to Mom Agata and Dad Wiesiek's chagrin. But then at her half-year mark, she put away her babyish ways and took up her life's work of herding.

On days when there is little demand for her profession, Maja's 11-year-old sister, Justyna roughhouses with her in the back yard to take up the slack.

SENIOR LIVING

Coffee Break

By BEVERLY BORGMAN

Eavesdropper at work

SHE HAD the look of someone waiting for a blind date, scanning everyone who came through the coffee shop door for the smallest spark of recognition. Outfitted in a carefully casual manner and hair nicely done, she nervously checked her watch every few minutes.

Then in walked another woman, dressed similarly and wearing that same tense expression until the first woman came forward and grasped her hand with great relief.

"Hi, I'm Alice," she said, and the newcomer replied, "I'm Betsy." (These are not their real names, of course. I may be nosy, but I'm not writing for the Enquirer.) Then the two of them stood in line to order their double decaf latte cappuccinos — whatever! — making the kind of small talk one makes in such a situation.

"Where are you staying?"

"Oh, we're at La Playa, Cypress Inn, Pine Inn" — you fill in the blank. Neither was really hearing the other because of their nervousness, but it helped to fill the time as they waited for their order.

A few minutes later they edged past me to a table in the corner, sat down, and began The Story of Their Lives!

I quickly figured out that these two women were in Carmel with their husbands. The men were either meeting over a conference table, attending a seminar, or playing 18 holes at Pebble — most likely at their companies' expense. The women had no doubt been encouraged to "mingle," meet the other wives, do a little shopping. Later, the couples would meet for dinner, perhaps at Casanova or the Highlands Inn.

Ah, if those husbands only knew! Unlike the "strong, silent" sex, women meeting women for the first time do not discuss sports, politics, the stock market or the car they drive. Within five minutes Alice and Betsy had gotten past

"Where do you live?" and "How many kids do you have?" and moved on to a child who was having difficulty in school, a mother who had just gotten a divorce and a sister who's an alcoholic.

They finally reached the subject that comes up so often when married women let their hair down: Their husbands don't spend enough time with the family, and they're working much too hard for ungrateful employers.

These must be the same employers who are picking up the tab for the lovely hotel rooms, the expensive dinners and the Pebble Beach greens fees.

STRANGER IN A STRANGE LAND

Ah, Carmel. Stranger than fiction. And so interesting to read about when the Monterey Herald uses canned copy from their parent company instead of sending their own "foreign correspondent" over the hill to check things out.

They recently printed a story by a visitor-reporter who took a look around, then brightly rhapsodized:

"Locals consider Carmel a magical place, where an overcast day is never gray — it's sterling silver." Pul-eeze!

As to the expected and nefarious references to high-heels being "outlawed" in our town, let me clarify, once and for all: Heels must be no more than two inches in height and have a weight-bearing surface of no less than one square inch. (This may be a problem if Michael Jackson ever drops by.)

Y'ALL COME

Undoubtedly, these syndicated stories published nationwide have their impact.

From my house I can see every tourist bus that comes to town. Two, in particular, caught my eye last week.

One was a Grayline, creeping along at five miles per hour, the driver obviously disbelieving that

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Plans to substitute electronic transfers for paper checks mailed to Social Security recipients are undergoing revisions. Originally, Congress voted to eliminate checks for most federal payments and employ electronic transfers to bank accounts. Starting this year, electronic transfers are the rule for recipients with bank accounts. Now, new proposals allow a waiver for the disabled and others who have trouble getting to their bank. Also, a rule requiring those without bank accounts to get one has been postponed. This rule had ignored the fact that people with low incomes can't afford to pay bank fees.

Karl Bido learned to work with wood in his father's cabinet-making shop in Germany in the early 1900s. He won a fine-arts scholarship based on his miniature wood-carving of a horse. Moving to the U.S. in the 1930s, he worked many years as a tool and die maker, then turned again to wood carvings of wildlife. At 90 he was still at it in Jenkintown, Pennsylvania. After seeing an elk on TV, he spent hours at a zoo studying how elk stand and move. Next he made a clay model, and finally an exquisite carving, "God is the greatest artist," Bido says. "I copy his work."

It's time to sing for Unsung Heroes

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THEY ARE the people who deliver books to the house-bound, the ones who help year-in and year-out at the Carmel Foundation. They are the first to volunteer at the Red Cross and the last to expect thanks. They are the dedicated St. Bernards, who watch over the elderly in their neighborhoods; they are the drivers for Meals on Wheels.

And now is the time to sing their praises.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea city council is looking for the "Unsung Heroes" of 1998, those members of the community who voluntarily contribute to the betterment of their fellow citizens.

Councilwoman Barbara Livingston is asking everyone in town, "Do you know of someone — a friend, neighbor or even a casual acquaintance — who goes about the quiet business of helping others? If you do, please take the time to fill out one of our application forms and let us know."

The qualifications are that the individual:

- is not paid for the contribution
- has not been publicly recognized for the service
- is neither an elected or appointed official, nor is employed by the city

■ performs the efforts within the city or the greater Carmel area.

Deadline for this year's nominations is Thursday, December 31. You can pick up a nomination form at Carmel City Hall.

Holiday lights allowed until January 13

THE CITY of Carmel announced that holiday lights — on trees in the public right-of-way and in or on commercial properties — can be displayed from now until January 13.

The city requires that the lights be secured, and not hung in a manner that will damage trees. Only exterior

"UL" lights and extension cords are allowed and flashing lights are prohibited.

Carmel Planner Chip Rerig, who is in charge of code enforcement, said he's had to deal with 50 cases in the last year of people who didn't take their lights down on time. The city's lighting policy has been in place for three years, Rerig said.

The Big Sur Land Trust

20 Years of Success: A Message from Zad Leavy, Executive Director & Founder

As The Big Sur Land Trust winds up its 20th Anniversary year, I want to take a few moments to reflect on the Land Trust's achievements. Our mission is to protect lands in Monterey County which are significant as natural habitat, open space and recreational property for the public's benefit. Since our inception in 1978, 84 transactions have been completed, resulting in the preservation of over 15,000 acres of scenic property along the Big Sur Coast and elsewhere throughout Monterey County. These properties have become a part of the fabric of our daily lives and are what make Monterey County precious to us all. They include:

- ☐ Point Lobos Ranch: 1312 acres which will become a part of the State Park system in 2003 and eventually will be open to the public
- ☐ Carmel Point: .5 acre and one of the most visible and publicly used properties ever purchased by the Land Trust
- ☐ Lime Creek: 510 acres of redwood forest in Big Sur

☐ Long Valley: 423 acres of watershed at to Elkhorn Slough, North Monterey County

☐ Prentiss: 480 pristine acres in Big Sur, bordering the Los Padres National Forest Ventana Wilderness area and the University of California Big Creek Preserve

☐ Coast Ranch: 134 acres formerly known as the Odello Artichoke Fields donated by Clint and Maggie Eastwood

☐ El Sur Ranch Highway Viewshed: 3,550 scenic acres spanning five miles along both sides of Highway One from the Little Sur River to Point Sur

Along with success comes responsibility. Many in this community turn to the Land Trust to save cherished open space. We are ready for the challenge, but now more than ever we must turn to our community. During 1999 we will continue to focus on saving valuable open space in need of preservation. As you review your year-end charitable giving, I hope you'll keep The Big Sur Land Trust in mind and will help the Land Trust continue its work by becoming a member or making a donation. You can make a difference. Your assistance will allow us to expand our efforts, strengthen our impact and continue to protect open space in Monterey County.

On behalf of our Board of Trustees, thank you for your belief in our work. We look forward to another twenty years of success and to your support.

Seeds of Wisdom

Come participate in one of our educational programs for nature lovers of all ages.

In July we will be conducting our 3rd annual Environmental Day Camp which is free and open to the children of Monterey County ages 8-16. This program gives those future naturalists a head start.

The 1999 Discovering Your True Nature contest for artists, photographers and writers ages 5-18. Finalists' work will be included in our very successful publication, Nature's Journal, and will grace the covers of our True Nature Cards.

Spring Hikes are an excellent opportunity to explore the 1,100 acre Mittendorf Preserve in Carmel Valley. Bring the whole family to see the largest Redwood tree in Monterey County.

We also offer in classroom presentations and field trip locations that provide students or other groups a special opportunity to learn more about nature.

To purchase Nature's Journal or True Nature Cards or to find out more about any of these programs, please contact The Big Sur Land Trust at 625-5523.

"Leaf" us Your Legacy

There are many ways you can help The Big Sur Land Trust preserve our area's natural beauty and benefit yourself at the same time:

Charitable Remainder Trusts: With a Charitable Remainder Trust (CRT), assets are placed in an irrevocable trust and those assets provide income to the donor and/or to other beneficiaries for life. There are many tax-saving benefits by using appreciated assets, even IRA's and other retirement accounts.

Bequests: The Land Trust can be remembered in wills, through cash or property bequests.

Appreciated Assets: Appreciated assets such as real estate, life insurance, stocks, bonds, securities, retirement accounts and even art can be donated to the Land Trust.

Pooled Income Fund: Our Pooled Income Fund is an exceptional way for individuals and couples to invest in the area's natural beauty for generations to come.

It is basically a charitable remainder trust fund, which combines, or "pools," your gift with those of other donors. The minimum requirement for participation is $5,000.

In the long run, the funds generated from your participation in any of these gifting programs will help the Big Sur Land Trust to continue its preservation of our area's irreplaceable natural beauty. What could be a better legacy than to insure this beauty for all time?

The Gift of Giving

"A gift of nature is a growing gift of gratitude for the living earth; that given once, exuberantly gives itself in return not alone to the giver or the receiver, but to all creatures of the earth for all time." - Emily Polk

'60 Minutes' story aired: Can corporate hog farms be far behind?

OK, SO The Carmel Pine Cone reaped national credit for exposing the soft underbelly of Congressionally mandated honor-system voting. Granted, the danger of massive fraud in absentee balloting without identification proof clearly exists. But not so fast. Before we hand out the Pulitzer Prize by acclamation, let me take a shot. How hard can this "investigative reporting" be?

After countless minutes of investigation (I lost my watch), in-depth interviews with my pre-teen son and source checking on MTV videos, I am ready to reveal findings of biblical import. Thanks to the national attention received by the Pine Cone's report, corporate hog farm interests have drawn up plans to take over Carmel. They intend to subvert the political process in our town by registering their animals to vote, packing the city council like so much sausage and despoiling our environment. Our current city council has been strangely silent on this threat. How's that for a story!

Corporate hog farms are huge tracts, spanning acres on which perhaps 300 barns house 300,000 hogs or more. These are not barracks for some super-secret pig army concocted by the Department of Defense. (Then again, maybe they are, since the Navy recruits dolphins. My sources were a bit unclear on that point.) Nor can we assume these are retirement communities for old pigs. No, these huge corporate farms efficiently breed and then slaughter the pigs for the market. Carmel's family hog farms are clearly at risk of extinction by this economic juggernaut.

These huge enterprises are well-known in North Carolina, but many Mid-Western communities have taken a vocal stand against their corporate incursion. Not only are family farmers threatened, but dead hog carcasses (as opposed to the extremely rare and valuable live carcasses) are also sometimes thoughtlessly left outside to "ripen." Nitrates from pig waste sometimes filter into the water table, poisoning the local water supply. Some day, if Carmel gets water again, this could become a problem.

And just where has our current city council been during this impending crisis? Not legislating, I'll tell you! Search the books as you will, you won't find a single law banning farms of 100,000 pigs. I know, I know: They think it's Pebble Beach's problem. That's the place (Or is it a corporation? Or is it merely a state of mind?) that has all the uninhabited land. But one should not be complacent about pigs in Pebble Beach either, not if you live downwind, if you catch my drift.

So, you see my not-so-subtle point. "Sandy Claws" was registered before, and she's not even a real dog. How much easier will it be for the faceless corporatists to register real live hogs? The only daunting task will be coming up with all those fake names. I suspect we'll start to see registrations like Porky Smith XXVI and Ima Runt XLII. Only in a blue-blood community like ours could someone hog the vote with numbered names like this.

An informed citizenry is an aroused citizenry. We have to be vigilant to eliminate swine-ish sympathizers. In the next election, candidates must be grilled on their positions thoroughly. Is pig slop appropriate for take-out food, or should it be restricted to sit-down restaurants? Should door knobs be banned as an elitist exclusionary device?

Of course, now that the alarm has been sounded, don't be so sure all pigs will vote by absentee ballot. We may not be able to ask for IDs, but you poll watchers should still be extra wary. If someone strolls up in sunglasses, broad-brimmed hat and overcoat, take decisive action. Snatch off the hat and glasses, shrieking, "Ah HAH!" This will have great dramatic (or comedic) effect. Losing candidates, of

CBA names 'excellence' nominees; ballots due Nov. 23

MORE THAN 300 nominations for the "best of the best" Carmel businesses were received by the Carmel Business Association last week, not only from the community, but from visitors as well, CBA President-elect Csaba Ajan announced. The three businesses to receive the most nominations in each of seven categories will be voted on by CBA members by Nov. 23.

Ajan, chairman of the 1998 Green Ribbon of Excellence Awards to be presented in December, said that ballots have been mailed to 530 CBA members for voting to select one business from their peers in each of the classifications.

The categories and nominees are:

Service to Residents and Visitors: The Carmel Pine Cone, American Red Cross and Adventures in Dining Magazine.

Cultural Organization: Carmel Bach Festival, Forest Theater Guild and Pacific Repertory Theatre.

Art or Antique Gallery: New Masters Gallery, Winters Gallery and Maxine Klaput Antiques.

Lodging: La Playa Hotel, Cypress Inn and Cobblestone Inn.

Retail: Nielsen Bros. Market, Bruno's Market and Kocek Jeweler.

Restaurant: Anton & Michel, Casanova Restaurant and Flying Fish Grill.

Real Estate: Fouratt-Simmons, Coldwell Banker/Del Monte and Alain Pinel.

Ballots must be received at the CBA office on San Carlos before 5 p.m., Monday, Nov. 23.

From the seven winning businesses, a Business of the Year will be selected and will be presented with a perpetual silver chalice at the Dec. 2 CBA gala dinner dance at La Playa Hotel. Green Ribbons of Excellence will be awarded to the seven category winners.

Tickets to the dinner are $75. A trip for two to Hawaii will be given as a door prize, and a "short and sweet auction" of half a dozen items will be held, Ajan said, adding, "The auction items represent fun things you can do in the Carmel area." To learn more, call the CBA at 624-2522.

So, you see, investigative reporting is not so painstaking and risky as seasoned reporters would have you believe. We new-wave investigators depend more on imagination than facts. Pat Herman's Farm Center was 'center of activity' in Carmel Valley

FOR PAT HERMAN, who owned and operated the Farm Center Country Store for 28 years, Carmel Valley was always close to his heart.

Mr. Herman died November 12 at age 84.

In 1955, Mr. Herman and his wife, Pauline, took an excursion to Carmel Valley and saw a sign that said "cottage for rent." Six months later, they bought the cottage, the country store and the entire corner property on Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads.

For the next three decades, the Farm Center was a Carmel Valley institution.

"It was an everything store when they bought it — the only gas station in Carmel Valley," said friend Bob Mattson. "It was really the center of activity for quite a while."

Randall Stuart Herman was born May 29, 1914 in Kodikanal, India, where he spent much of his childhood. He graduated from Carleton College in Northfield, Minn., where he was an All-American athlete.

Mr. Herman served as Lt. Commander in the U.S. Navy during World War II. After the war, he served in the military government of Guam before being appointed as the territorial secretary.

When the Hermans bought the Farm Center and settled in Pebble Beach in the 1950s, they had found a lifelong home. Both Pat and Pauline were avid riders at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center.

Mr. Herman continued to ride and play polo into his 80s, friends said.

In recent years, the couple rented out many of the corner property's cottages to local artists. Up until the end of his life, Mr. Herman always took care of the maintenance at the Farm Center himself.

Diane Stegman remembered that Mr. Herman was "happy and dapper," decked out in polo boots and cap.

"He was unassuming for all his accomplishments and talents," said artist Diane Swift.

Mr. Herman is survived by his wife, Pauline, of Pebble Beach and a brother, Harold, of Chicago.

An informal memorial will be held at 1 p.m. on Sunday November 22 at the Equestrian Center in Pebble Beach followed by a trail ride for those who wish to participate.

OBITUARY

Irene Mackenzie brought her sense of style to great cities of the world

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IRENE MACKENZIE'S spirit of adventure took her around the world and through exciting careers as a fashion model, journalist and translator.

Mrs. Mackenzie, a 30-year Carmel resident, died of cancer November 3. She was 69.

Born in Hamilton, Scotland, Irene Mayo earned a master's degree in modern languages from Edinburgh University and continued her studies at the University of Zurich, Switzerland.

Her unexpected modeling career began when a photograph — taken of her at a university ball — ended up on a magazine cover.

Meanwhile, Irene continued her language studies and landed a post with the United Nations as a simultaneous translator in French and German. Then the fashion industry lured her to Vienna to lead an international tour of fashions — featuring Austrian costume and dances from the Middle Ages to the 20th Century.

Irene stayed in Vienna to teach modeling, languages and fashion, using her talents to become a top runway model and commentator for fashion shows — describing the latest styles to audiences in three different languages.

Always ready for the latest career challenge, she joined the staff of Les Ambassadeurs magazine in Brussels as a journalist. She then took a job with the Picture Post in London where she wrote about fashion and graced the pages as the "Cover Girl of the Year" in 1954.

'Dance with my date'

The next stop on Irene's fashion career was New York, with a job as fashion coordinator for Huntington Hartford. While working as a model in San Francisco for a few months, she met her husband, Graeme Mackenzie.

"We met by a total coincidence," Graeme said. His friend, Walter MacAdam, invited him to the Scottish Ball in San Francisco and cryptically told him, "You can't sit at my table, but come and dance with my date."

Graeme, who ended up sitting at a table with Russians who didn't speak much English, didn't hesitate to visit MacAdam and his beautiful redheaded date Irene, who — as grand luck would have it — was just a friend. Graeme and Irene married at Carmel Presbyterian Church in 1957. The couple lived in Hong Kong for seven years and returned to manage the Mark Thomas Inn in Monterey.

In 1975, they purchased the Sandpiper Inn in Carmel and operated the hotel for 23 years before selling it this past May.

Mrs. Mackenzie served on the boards of the Monterey Institute of International Studies, the Monterey County Symphony Guild and the Monterey Museum of Art. She put her sense of style to work for charity by planning and handling decorations for various social events, her husband said. Her keen fashion sense also came in handy for arranging flowers and interior decor.

"She had a mind-boggling memory for colors," he said. "We would go back to a person's house after 30 years and she would say 'I remember the color of the living room' in order to buy them a gift."

Mrs. Mackenzie is survived by her husband of 41 years, Graeme; son Colin of Ross; and daughter Fiona of Hollywood.

Doing nothing still isn't an option

WITH THE release this week of the Supplemental Environmental Impact Report for Cal-Am's "no growth" dam on the upper Carmel River, water users in the Carmel area are reminded once again of the high cost — both financial and environmental — of building a new dam.

Not only would a new dam add 20% to the average monthly water bill, inundate wildlife habitat and affect the riparian environment in unpredictable ways, construction of the huge structure will clog the roads and pollute the air for up to two years.

Alternatives to the dam don't do much better. A desal plant will discharge large amounts of concentrated brine into the Pacific Ocean and, even if combined with better conservation measures, cost much more than a dam.

But whatever the drawbacks of enhancing our water supply, doing nothing is simply not an option — because the cost of having an inadequate water supply is much higher than the cost of any of the water supply alternatives analyzed in the EIR.

Without a new water supply, the precious liquid will continue to be so scarce that it warps the common sense of public officials, transforms thousands of ordinary citizens into law breakers, turns neighbors against each other, and — during droughts — can cost millions of dollars in lost economic activity, including jobs.

To see a good example of the costs of a water shortage, just take a look at our lead story. The water management district has enacted a set of rules that includes the possibility of a very severe penalty for a homeowner who installs a water fixture — a toilet or a sink, for example — that the district says he's not entitled to have.

Incredible as it may seem, the district says that the penalty for such a high crime could be the "extinction" of all water rights at the property where the illegal fixture was installed. No water at all! Forever! The house itself might as well be blown up.

And the district requires unsuspecting people who want to remodel their house a bit to sign a document — which also has to be notarized and then recorded at the county courthouse — stating that the applicant is aware that this penalty may be imposed for "intensification of water use without a permit" at their home.

Imagine what can happen if your neighbor has a reason not to like you. Or if anybody at all has an axe to grind with you or your business or your family.

This kind of silliness has to stop.

An adequate public water supply is one of the basic underpinnings of modern society. Without it, California would not be the mighty agricultural state — providing food to millions — that it is. It is no exaggeration to say that the availability of plentiful, clean water is a principal reason why the life expectancy of the average American has nearly doubled since the beginning of this century.

No one wants Carmel Valley or Big Sur to become urbanized. But we must use the zoning process to prevent overdevelopment from happening, instead of trying to do it obliquely through the denial of basic human services to the people who already live here.

'More natural numbers'

Dear Editor:

Often a crisis is required to bring the public, or the government, to its senses, and so it is with the local raccoon population.

These animals are, in my opinion, vermin. They have caused serious problems for years. The only reason action to reduce their numbers wasn't taken long ago is that many people find them cute.

Unfortunately, a little boy is seriously ill. But at least his suffering has brought many of us to our senses. Raccoons may be cute, but there is no reason why several thousand of them should be living in the City of Pacific Grove!

I wholeheartedly support the action taken by the police in Pacific Grove to reduce the number of raccoons there, and I think the police chief is a hero for unequivocally speaking out on the subject. KSBW TV also did an excellent job with their special reports on raccoons last week.

But my special thanks go to The Carmel Pine Cone for being the first local news outlet to honestly report about this issue, and to give it the serious treatment it deserves.

The SPCA kills many thousands of dogs and cats a year — unwanted animals thoughtlessly brought into the world by irresponsible human owners.

The thousands of raccoons occupying our towns are also unwanted, and were also brought into the world because of the irresponsible actions of humans. If their numbers are reduced to a more natural level, we will all benefit.

Carmel's Nathan Trosky on a hardball mission

By JERRY STEWART

THROUGHOUT HIS life, 28-year-old Nathan Trosky has had baseballs flowing through his veins.

His family tree includes six former professional ballplayers — among them his grandfather, Hal, a star first baseman, and an uncle, also named Hal. Both played for the Chicago White Sox. They were perhaps the earliest father-son combination in the game's history.

Nathan Trosky

Starting when he was very small, Nathan Trosky would work on the fundamentals of the game for hours almost every day with his dad.

When he entered Pacific Grove High, Trosky put his skills and knowledge to use on the diamond, leading his team in hitting and being named All-League as a third baseman.

After graduation, he took his skills north to San Jose City College, where he was named All-League as a second baseman en route to leading the squad to a fourth-place finish in the 1989 Junior College World Series.

From there, he transferred to Hawaii Pacific University, and while on the islands he garnered Rookie of the Year, Scholar Athlete, Mr. Hustle and All-American honors.

The future was bright, but soon there would be no joy in Mudville.

More than seven years on the diamond had taken its toll on Trosky's arm. Instead of playing under the lights, Trosky found himself laying under the lights as surgeons tried to repair the damage.

Five operations later, Trosky's dreams of playing in the big leagues were history.

"I was bummed out, but I'm spiritual and felt the Lord would put me somewhere else," said Trosky. "I knew I'd end up where I fit best."

Soon after, Trosky found himself still on the field, but in a different role.

He accepted an offer to become an assistant coach for HPU's junior varsity team, and, after thoroughly enjoying the experience, he returned to his roots where he was named an assistant at Monterey Peninsula College.

In 1994 Trosky hooked up with fellow baseball mind Dave Holt to create the Trosky/Holt baseball camps, but bigger things were on deck.

In early 1996, Rich Aldrete, founder of the Aldrete Baseball Academy in Monterey and coach of the Salinas Peppers, decided to step down from his post.

Aldrete searched for a competent replacement, and Trosky's qualifications fit the bill.

For the next year and a half Trosky got even more coaching exposure, as he helped striving minor leaguers master the arts of base running, hitting and fielding as an assistant for the Class "A" Peppers and Adirondack (New York) Lumberjacks.

Trosky's skills as a coach had taken him across the continent, and soon enough he would find himself in a new one.

While playing at SJCC Trosky had befriended Scott Gash. Gash, along with 19 of Trosky's former SJCC teammates, had gone on to play professionally in Europe.

When a coaching position became available for the Cologne Dodgers in Germany, the Carmelite packed his bags and said "Auf wiedersehen."

"When we first got at the airport in Bonn we were sitting around and had our bats out," said Trosky. "The police wanted to arrest us because they thought we were hooligans. They didn't know what the bats were really for."

The Yankee had landed, and Trosky knew he'd be in for an adventure as he tried to teach Germans how to hit and not kick balls. Soccer, after all, is the national pastime all over Europe.

"We share our field with a huge horse complex, and during the year there was a big equestrian show," said Trosky. "Afterwards the field was quite a mess. Also, no one goes after foul balls."

Nonetheless, Trosky settled in and helped direct his 20-member squad, which features two Americans, to wins in the German Championship and the Second Division European Cup Championship.

"The German players are just regular people with regular jobs, but they're really into it," said Trosky. "You can only play two Americans at the same time so the Germans get their feet wet."

Because of his team's success, Trosky was picked to be one of the North All-Star coaches and was even named Coach of the Year.

This March Trosky will welcome his Dodgers to the Peninsula when they come for 10 days of spring training at the Aldrete academy.

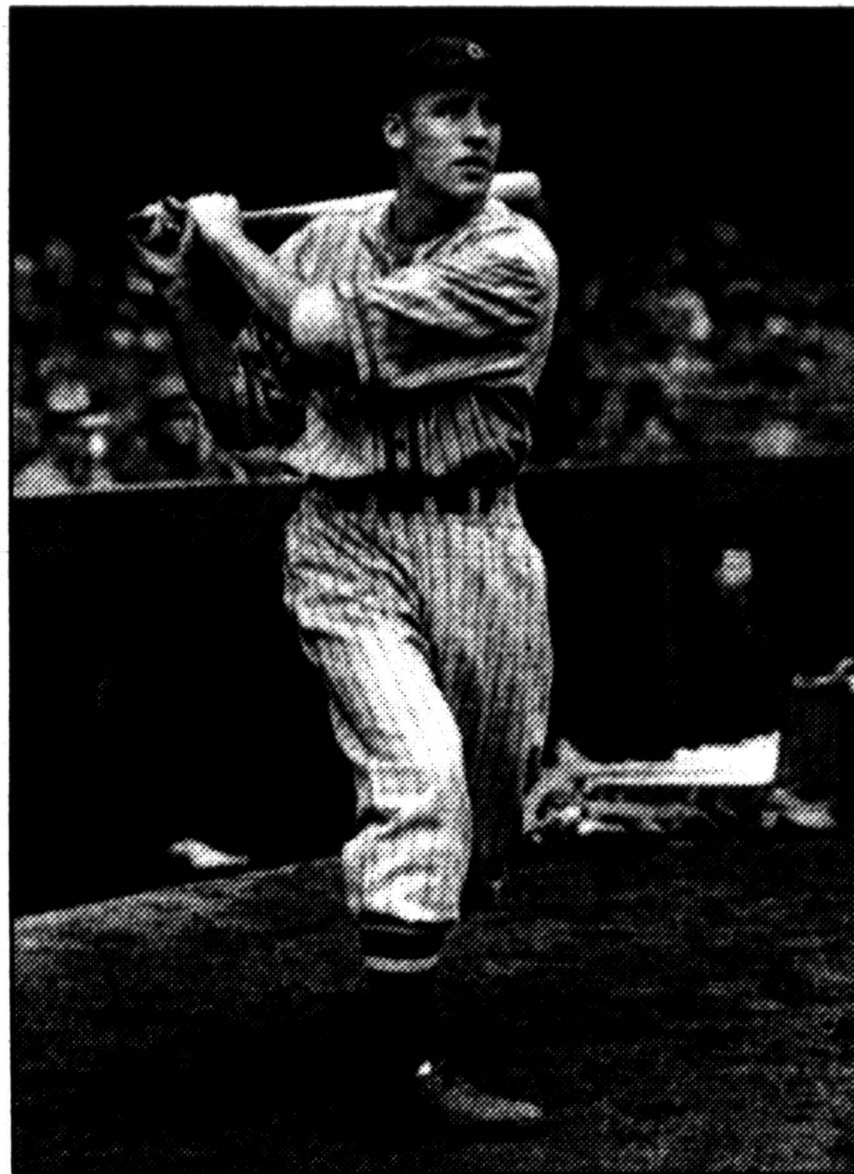

After that, Trosky will return with his squad to help manage the 1999 campaign and to try to get the Germans a bid for the 2000 Olympics in Australia.

"It would be weird to be at the Olympics and represent a different country," Trosky said.

To qualify, the German National Team will have to finish third or better at the European Championships, which are slated for August, 1999, in Italy.

"Looking back, I can see how it's all fit together like a glove," said Trosky. "My gift is what I can offer as a coach."

Somewhere in Cologne, a few men are surely raising their steins in gratitude.

PHOTOS/COURTESY NATHAN TROSKY

Nathan Trosky wanted to follow in the footsteps of his grandfather but has found success in the dugout instead of on the field. The elder Trosky (above) had a career .302 batting average in the '30s and '40s playing for the Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox and had 142 RBIs during his rookie season — more than anybody except the great Lou Gehrig.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF PUBLIC HEARING NOVEMBER 24, 1998

Route 1 in Monterey County, from 0.28 Miles South of the Carmel River to 0.1 Mile South of the Route 1/68 Interchange ("the Hatton Canyon Project")

WHAT'S BEING PLANNED

CALTRANS (California Department of Transportation) is proposing to realign Highway 1 in Carmel. The new alignment would begin at the Carmel River, run through Hatton Canyon, and connect with the existing Highway 1/68 West interchange. The project would relieve current traffic congestion, lessen emergency vehicle response time, reduce crossing conflicts at local intersections and driveways, improve safety, ameliorate air quality, and bring the rural road character back to the local area. This project is the #1 priority of funded projects in the Monterey County Regional Transportation Improvement Program.

The proposed work would impact 5.3 acres of riparian and emergent wetland. On-site and off-site wetland mitigation is proposed.

WHY THIS AD

A Draft Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement/Report (DSEIS/R) has been prepared to address a deficiency in the analysis of cumulative impacts contained in the 1991 Final Environmental Impact Statement/Report (FEIS/R), as identified by the United States District Court in City of Carmel by-the-Sea v United States Department of Transportation (United States District Court, Northern District of California Case No. 92 20002 SW). The DSEIS/R also includes a Draft Addendum/Reevaluation that discusses new information or changes in circumstances that may have arisen since the 1991 FEIS/R's approval. There will be a Public Hearing/Open House at the Carmel Middle School to discuss the project, the Draft Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement/Report (DSEIS/R) and Draft Addendum/Reevaluation findings, and the proposed 404 permit under the Clean Water Act. The Federal Highway Administration and Caltrans have approved the DSEIS/R that evaluates the project's cumulative environmental effects.

WHAT'S AVAILABLE

You can review or obtain a copy of the DSEIS/R (including the Draft Addendum/Reevaluation) and other project information at the Caltrans location listed below. The DSEIS/R is also available for review at the following locations during normal business hours:

'Hippest jazz vocalist' Mark Murphy sings Saturday

SIX-TIME Grammy nominee Mark Murphy returns to the Jazz Store in Carmel Saturday, Nov. 21, accompanied by pianist Larry Dunlap. Voted the 1996 Downbeat Magazine Readers "Best Male Jazz Singer," Murphy was discovered more than 40 years ago at a jam session by Sammy Davis Jr. Since then Murphy has released more than 40 albums.

Record producer Orrin Keepnews recalls Murphy's early recordings as "timeless . . . it's remarkable how fully developed as an artist Mark was so early on. He was born with his incredible rhythmic sense. And he's matured throughout the years, his vocal powers remain undiminished."

Arguably the "hippest jazz vocalist" performing in the world today, Murphy's list of admirers is long and impressive. Vocal greats Betty Carter, Peggy Lee, Cleo Laine and Shirley Horn all sing Murphy's praises and the legendary Ella Fitzgerald once commented "he is my equal."

A master of the hip and bebop idiom, Murphy returns to Carmel in support of his latest recording, "Song for The Geese," on Muse Records. Also coming up at the Jazz Store . . . next Friday, Nov. 27, dynamic alto saxophonist Richie Cole appears with vocalist Giacomo Gates. Jazz Store proprietors Wisdom and Schultz guarantee that "sparks will fly." Music starts at 7:30 p.m. Standard $25 admission includes two sets.

Sonny G at the Mission Ranch in Carmel

One of the best-kept secrets on the Monterey Peninsula, pianist Sonny G (Sonny Gibson) has been playing piano at the Mission Ranch in Carmel weekly for more than five years. A native of Hattiesburg, Tenn., Gibson moved to the Monterey Peninsula in the mid-'90s after having performed for more than 10 years

Plugged In

at numerous upscale hotels in the Dallas, Texas area as well as at the prestigious Maho Resort Hotel on the Caribbean Island of St. Martin.

Known for his high energy sing-alongs as much as for his tasteful interpretations of Gershwin, Cole Porter, et al Gibson earlier this year released his first CD, Sonny G Volume 1. The album features Gibson playing piano and singing such standards as "When I Fall In Love," "Someone to Watch Over Me," "Phantom of the Opera" and Gershwin's "I've Got Rhythm."

Having recently returned to Carmel from a promotional trip back to his hometown in Tennessee, Gibson is once again back at the Mission Ranch performing every Tuesday and Thursday through Sunday evenings between 9 and midnight. Although the CD is not available in local stores, Gibson has already sold close to 1,000 units "off the band stage." For dining reservations and/or directions to the Mission Ranch, contact 625-9040

Promoter Barbara Murphy presents an interesting melange of performances this month beginning with a Friday, Nov. 20 concert at the Media Room in Pacific Grove, "Tales and Music from the Emerald Isle." Native Irish storyteller Tomassen Foley presents the magic and enchantment of daily life in the tiny community of teampall Na nGhleantain. He will be accompanied by guitarist William Coulter and Irish/Scots fiddler Deby Benton Grosjean. Coulter has been performing and recording traditional music in the Monterey Bay area since 1981. He has released two albums of Celtic music on the Narada label which have been featured on three different Billboard Top Ten collections of Celtic music, as well as three critically acclaimed CDs of Shaker melodies. Music starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $12 in advance and $14 at the door. Call 373-7379.

At Carleton Hall, located in the Church of the Monterey Religious Science on Franklin Street, Portofino Presents a Thanksgiving concert at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 27 featuring renowned harpist and singer Erik Berglund. A resident of Mount Shasta, Berglund tours the world and has performed at the Lincoln Center and Carnegie Recital Hall in New York City. He sings popular ballads and original compositions that are "uplifting and deeply satisfying." Tickets are $12 in advance and $14 at the door. Call 373-7379.

A crowded Doc's Nightclub for last week's performance by Dave Wakeling at the Cannery Row nightclub gives new owners Sean Croce and company reason to believe that the new aggressive approach to booking will work. Other upcoming concerts that should test Monterey's willingness to support touring/recording acts (as opposed to local fare) include The Blasters on Friday, Nov. 27; contemporary blues artist Tab Benoit on Monday, Nov. 30; Shana Morrison (daughter of Van) on Saturday, Dec. 5; and Dave Alvin on Thursday, Dec. 10. For more information and ticket prices call Doc's Nightclub at 649-4241.

Other alternatives for live music this weekend on Cannery Row include the Cadillac Angels, a Santa Barbara surf/rockabilly band, at the Blue Fin Cafe & Billiards this Friday (no cover/9 p.m. start); a CD release party for Stormin' Norman and the Cyclones at Doc's Nightclub this Saturday; and at Sly Mcfly's, guitar hero Terry Hiatt and the Fabulous Firebirds on Friday and Saturday nights respectively.

THE BOOKSHELF

Suggestions to please bibliophilic friends

GET OUT YOUR Christmas book list: We've got three diverse books by local authors that are bound to suit you or one of your bibliophilic friends or family members.

Followers of Shirley Rousseau Murphy's mystery cat novels featuring Joe Grey, P.I., will be thrilled to know the fourth in the series, "Cat in the Dark," will be on local bookstore shelves by Dec. 1.

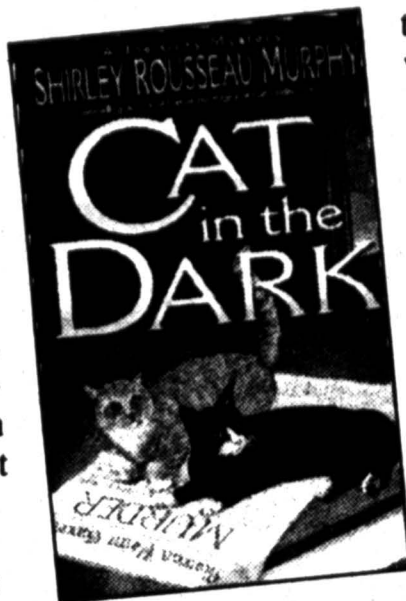

Not to be confused with other writers of cat mysteries (Lillian Jackson Braun, Carole

By Margot Petit Nichols

Nelson Douglas, Rita Mae Brown), Murphy's mysteries are tougher, more intricately plotted, and have almost as many finely drawn sub-characters as those in the novels of Angela Thirkell. They're witty, too, and written beautifully with great style.

Joe and Dulcie Grey, male and female crime-fighting cats, can talk and communicate with Clyde and Wilma Grey, human owners of their comfortable domicile located in a small, picturesque California coastal town (could it be Carmel-by-the-Sea?).

Azrael — a huge, mean-dude-of-a-cat — comes to town, and is instrumental in a series of thefts perpetrated by his equally repugnant human. Crotchety Joe and sweet Dulcie are soon onto the thieves, but how to communicate this information to the villagers without revealing their unique and secret intellectual and vocal talents?

On top of the robberies, Dulcie may lose her cushy daytime job as local library cat, and both Joe and Dulcie and other town cats may be deprived of an evening handout at a favorite delicatessen. Not earth-shaking problems, you might think, but, well-woven into the main plot.

Throughout the book, which has a definite dark side, we are treated to fascinating, esoteric cat lore tidbits that will be of great interest to ailurophiles.

Murphy, who recently moved to Carmel, is a native Californian who has lived in such diverse places as Panama, Portland and Atlanta. She has written more than two-dozen children's books and young adult fantasy novels, — she won the School Library Journal's 1992 Best Young Adult Books award — and found the switch to adult novels "a big jump. I had a sense of freedom with the Joe Grey books," she told The Pine Cone this week. "I didn't have to invent whole worlds" [as she did in her YA fantasies].

"The cat thing comes naturally to me," she continued. "I think I was a cat in a former life." And of course there are cats in her Carmel home: Lucy, an orphan cat who is said to be a great hunter, and ELT (pronounced el-tee). Seated in her tidy book-lined writing studio that looks out onto a courtyard, Murphy observed, "ELT's role in life is to mess up my desk, and then leave."

Now working on her fifth Joe Grey novel for a January deadline, Rousseau has also signed for two more books for 1999.

The "Cat in the Dark" book sells for $22 and is published by HarperPrism, a division of HarperCollins Publishers.

The first three Joe Grey books, in order of publication, in case you want to catch up, are: "Cat on the Edge," "Cat Under Fire" and "Cat Raise the Dead." The Library Cat Society has given her Joe Grey books "two paws up."

So do we.

CECELIA GEORGE has written a very personal, yet universal book of poetry that chronicles an eight-year struggle for her life. Its title is "Against My Will."

The Monterey poet/photographer — who was a professional concert violinist for 30 years before being afflicted with lupus and scleroderma — hopes to make the public aware of these illnesses so they will support much-needed research. George, who has been known until recently as Cecelia George Bayes, will be donating most of the money realized from sales of her book to just such research.

Not only is her book a personal chronicle, it is an inspiration for the legions of people who suffer from debilitating chronic diseases. She wants her book to bring courage to those who share a hope for healing and that it will be "a daily support for them to hold in their hands."

After eight years, George is again picking up her violin and playing for a short time each day, despite the pain, and hopes soon to be back to playing the piano.

In an excerpt from her poem, "Coming Home," George counsels:

*Everything in life takes practice learning to die living with moments walking on dark roads calling my own name
Giving birth to all the ordinary in pain
humbled on knees
I learn to stand
Tall
in the rain, alone . . .*

The 104-page trade paperback published by Scythe Publications, Inc., Nashville, Tenn., sells for $9.95 and has 13 sensitive photographs of George taken by Judith Harper.

Meet Cecelia George in person at a booksigning from 1 to 3 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 22 at The Thunderbird Bookshop, Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel. For information, call 624-1803.

WHAT'S UP WITH THE GRANARY?

Earlier this year when Whole Food Markets, Inc. bought out the Granary Market at 173 Central in Pacific Grove, a lot of people wondered who would take that space. Wonder no more, it's The Grove Homescapes.

Owners Thomas Finklang, Beau Finklang and Thompson Lange opened The Grove Homescapes in December 1996 and have seen their business take off as Pacific Grove became known as a center for high-quality home furnishings. In addition to floral and plantscaping services, The Grove Homescapes specializes in local art, unique gifts and one-of-a-kind furniture from around the world.

The new Homescapes' Warehouse has 4,500 square feet of additional space that will act as the first port of call for the "fresh off the boat" pieces from China, Indonesia, France and Turkey that The Grove Homescapes directly imports.

Homescapes' Warehouse also allows The Grove Homescapes to expand its flower department, process a larger back-stock of plants for its plantscaping division and add new lines of furniture without crowding the main showroom at 472 Lighthouse in downtown Pacific Grove.

Homescapes' Warehouse is open by appointment and for special promotions. Call The Grove Homescapes at 831-656-0864 to preview their newest arrivals.

LA DOLCE VITA SI

If A TRIP TO ITALY isn't in your scheme of things for the holidays, perhaps you can swing a lunch or dinner at La Dolce Vita Ristorante where the food and ambiance replicate the heart and soul of that sensual, magnificent country.

From the tissue paper thin slices of carpaccio, an appetizer plate worthy of being photographed, to CDs of romantic songs sung by Andrea Bocelli over the restaurant's sound system, La Dolce Vita captures the essence of Italy.

Executive chef and general manager Argeo Bergamasco, who hails from northern Italy near Trieste, is in charge of the kitchen and dining room operations, and is responsible for the menu and atmosphere autentica that predominates at this favorite Carmel restaurant that opened seven years ago.

Restaurateur Nico Mavris, owner of both La Dolce Vita and Nico's — also on San Carlos, but between Ocean and 7th Avenue — divides his time between the two restaurants, taking Bergamasco's place on his days off.

derfully crisp autumnal eve just beginning to mist, we opted for an indoor table, warmed illusorily by the Venetian red walls.

Going Italian, we ordered not only an appetizer and a pasta as primo piatto, but an entrée secondo as well — then a small dolce and an espresso. We specified, however, that our pasta course be a half-portion, and were pleasantly surprised, when the tab later showed we had been charged for only half ($5.95). Che molto gentile!

As has become the custom in recent years, a dipping sauce arrived with the thinly sliced warm bread (a rarity these days) wrapped nicely in white linen. The sauce was flavorful and substantial with sundried tomatoes, mildly hot peppers and anchovies minced and blended with the olive oil — a fine accompaniment to a glass of young Stone Creek 1996 Merlot ($4.95).

The Carpaccio Cipriani appetizer ($6.50) arrived with the thinly sliced raw beef fillet fanned out attractively on the plate, drizzled with olive oil and lemon juice, sprinkled with minced parsley, capers and a few shavings of parmeiggiano, and decorated with a lemon twist and a frond of flat leafed Italian parsley. Fresh ground black pepper enhanced all the flavors. The carpaccio could not have been better. Other appetizers cost from $4.25 to $6.50, and there is a antipasto misto for two for $8.95.

The merlot held up well during the pasta course and followed into the entrée, which was Vitello Limone Rosmarino ($16.95), veal scaloppini sautéed in olive oil with rosemary and small portions of lemon with its peel. The olive oil is then discarded, and the veal is finished with butter and white wine. Lemon juice and capers complete the dish.

Oblique slices of carrot, zucchini and crooked neck squash accompanied the veal, as did a small rectangle of polenta, soft and light (as opposed to dense), which was topped with a fresh tomato sauce and a little Parmesan. Minced parsley was strewn artistically over the food and the edges of the large plate the size of a charger. Entrées run from $11.95 to $18.95.

Delicious Dolci

For dessert, we specified vanilla gelato ($3) and an espresso ($2.75) with a little milk. The "Ciao, Bella" gelato arrived in a sherry glass, and when we sampled it, the real vanilla bean used in its preparation was evident. We were amazed at both a creaminess and a crystalline quality that one rarely encounters together in ice cream. It was perfect. The espresso was accompanied with a side of steamed milk, enabling us to make a macchiato, an espresso "stained" with steamed milk — from the Italian macchiare — to stain.

A fine list of Italian, French and California wines ranging from $17 (a 1993 Sauvignon Blanc, Enz Vineyards, Lime Kiln Valley, CA) to $675 (a 1978 Bordeaux, Chateau Lafite-Rothschild, Grand Cru Pauillac) provide the oenophile with some worthy choices, including excellent Chiantis, Barolos, Friuli, and Umbrian wines to name only a few.

For those interested in the Andrea Bocelli CDs, one is called "Romanza," and another, "Viaggio Italiano."

The fettuccine was verde

No Italian dinner is complete without a pasta course (we had been anticipating it all the way to the restaurant), and so we selected Fettuccine al Pesto Genovese. The pasta is made fresh daily next door at Pasta Palate, and to our surprise, the fettuccine, when placed before us in a proper welled minestre dish — perfect for pasta and soup alike — turned out to be fettuccine verde. It was topped with fresh, house-made pesto, a sprinkling of toasted pine nuts and decorated with a basil leaf. The server brought an oversize silver serving bowl (a pleasure to the eye) of grated parmeiggiano Reggiano, and scattered a generous portion over the pasta. The half portion was ample, and anticipating the main course to follow, regrettably we abandoned about half of it on our plate. Pastas range from $8.25 to $14.95; pizzas from $8.25 to $9.95.

Golfing Soroptimists raise funds to battle breast cancer

I HAVE a bone to pick with the inventors of Daylight Savings Time. Yeah, yeah, you'd assume that as the holiday season picks up, I'd be grateful for a bit of extra sleep in the morning. Well, you're wrong. But ONLY because of a very small but extremely significant overlooked detail: NOBODY bothered to explain how the system works to the domesticated dogs of the world.

Golf Clinic keynote speaker Sharon Randall and Soroptimist President Linda Lamb.

Ever try to tell a high-strung Yorkie — whose punctuality can be measured in milliseconds — that he needs to wait 'til 7 a.m. for his breakfast? Take it from me: it's pointless, even though I haven't given up trying.

So, here's the scene every morning:
6 a.m. sharp — the Yorkie, Dax, begins whining from under his blanket;

6:01 — I start wrestling with the toy poodle, Shaki, who's now awake and wants to get out from under her blanket.

6:05 — I lose the battle with Shaki who escapes to Dax and pulls the blanket off him with her teeth, which he — at age 15 — has lost. I momentarily delude myself into thinking I can still ignore them.

6:07 — Shaki grabs the cover I've pulled over my head with her teeth and begins tugging rhythmically to the accompaniment of Dax's ear-splitting yapping.

6:10 — after a heroic battle, I accept — yet again — that I've met my Waterloo. I surrender.

Soroptimists host a very special golf clinic

In our part of the world, it's possible to build up an immunity to the excitement of yet another golfing event. But the enthusiasm was infectious from those who traveled far to participate and from those who made it all happen during the sixth annual Monterey Peninsula Women's Golf Clinic organized by Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay. They made Rancho Cañada the place to be Nov. 13th.

Year after year, this event provides financial support (more than $80,000 to date) for breast cancer research. Even Office Depot and Longs have become dedicated sponsors. Not surprisingly, this tireless fight against breast cancer creates an incredibly emotional camaraderie among these women, some of whom are cancer survivors themselves.

This year, the special treat was the guest of honor, Kay McMahon, president of the National LPGA Teaching Division. Her credentials may be impressive on paper, but what gets to you is her irresistible personality. From her Number One Rule: "Look good carrying the golf bag!" to her hilarious performance as auctioneer at the evening reception, she almost tempted me to take up golfing. (I said "almost.")

Soroptimists Kate Breuleux and Shari Hastey had the whole day's schedule running like clockwork. Pam Scholfield (who risked her neck by letting me chauffeur her in a golf cart), Lori Kohn, Bernie O'Keefe and Denise St. Angelo-Stiles, to name just a few, spent the day trying their best to pamper participants. One guest was 15-year-old Monique Dobson, who began Sssshhhhh! Don't spread this around! I'm about to reveal to you the best-kept secret in town! Next time you're looking for incredibly stylish, haute couture outfits for unbelievably throw-away prices (as in $800 down to $45), sneak into Carmel's Yellow Brick Road Benefit Shop!

I was stunned at the fashion show/tea party held on November 14th, at Del Mesa's Redwood Room (courtesy of Ramona Smith). The outfits modeled by volunteers Arlyne Allen, Peg Chadwick, Becky, Katie and Ginger Craft, Renee Dalton, Mavis Edwards, Bettie Fisk, Lauren Jeter, Joan Keyzers, Donna Tucker and John Meluso made my jaw drop. Even board president Beverly Ambert commented on how unbelievable their bargains are. It's easy to see why volunteers like Patricia Rowedder love working at the shop: "It's like Christmas every day!"

But obviously they don't take themselves too seriously. A humorous skit by Sandy Rensvold, Pat Myers and Betsy Dunaway dressed in absurdly colored clothing had the whole room rolling in laughter!

Event coordinator Bernice Hebert confessed she had to do some arm-twisting to persuade otherwise-reserved individuals to model for the event. I'd say all could consider a new career in modeling. But my prize goes to John Meluso — I think he was to the catwalk born!

"Somewhere over the rainbow, there's the perfect deal you've been looking for..."

Meals on Wheels provides unforgettable dining

Do you remember the last time you were sick and desperate for someone to bring you nourishment, but didn't want to impose on neighbors or friends? Or how good you felt if you were lucky enough to have a spouse or house-help to feed you? This is what Meals On Wheels is all about.

And thanks to Sardine Factory's Bert Cutino, the top chefs of the area collaborated on November 15th in a unique fundraising evening. Bert had all of them prepare their own interpretation of the same dishes. As if that weren't enough to tempt the palate, each table was spectacularly decorated. Kathie Ritter of At Home and Janice Gistinelli were just a few of those who donated their design talents.

Waiting for the show to begin were gourmet food lovers like Lee and Artie Early, (who donated dinner for eight at of the following, here's the scoop on Laguna Seca. Did you know that practically all the support staff for the races is comprised of volunteers from local non-profits? These groups then receive huge annual donations from the track's coordinating (non-profit) organization, SCRAMP (Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula).

On November 12, more than $500,000 was paid out to dozens of charities, including the Carmel Valley Rotary Club at a reception at the Monterey Marriott. As SCRAMP board member Steve Hurst commented, "These non-profit groups are the heart and soul of our organization; we exist to give them help, and we depend on them to give us help." Steve also mentioned that SCRAMP is being considered as a model for other county organizations.

Another board member, financial adviser George Covell, feels he's got it made: He gets to help put on "world-class motor sports events" while at the same time giving money away to charity. For a serious auto buff who dismantled his '60 Austin Healey down to the last screw (I swear — I saw the pieces with my own eyes!), then reassembled and drove it, being involved with SCRAMP is heaven on earth!

■ Singular gathering of philanthropists

Imagine walking into a room filled with more than 400 members of the area's philanthropic Who's Who and non-profit directors. As Pebble Beach's Mark Verbonich quipped at Spanish Bay on November 16th, "It's daunting!"

The event was the Seventh Annual Philanthropy Day Awards Luncheon, sponsored by Pebble Beach and First National Bank with music by Jonathon Lee. Unfortunately I don't have the space to list all the honorees. But here are just a few: Bill and Nancy Doolittle cited for their Sunset Center efforts; Ed Haber for his commitment to the SPCA; Chuck and Carol Sweet for their work with the Aquarium; Darnell and Anne-Lise Whitt to whom Carmel Music Society's new Steinway piano is largely due; Joe and Carolyn Samson, long-time supporters of Monterey County Symphony (the passing of Joe hit everyone hard); Susan Littlefield, Linda Dorris, Hilton and Roberta Bialek. The list goes on and on.

Lou Russo accepted the award for Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation as the "Outstanding Corporate Philanthropist." New Monterey Rotary Sunrise President Joe Sweeney took the award for his club. Sadly, his predecessor, Phil Cogbill, had just passed away unexpectedly a few days earlier.

The "Philanthropists of the Year," though, were Eugene and Ercia Harden, founders of the Harden

Mark Murphy

Sat.
Nov. 21

Mark Murphy is one of the most inventive, swinging jazz singers performing today. With a deep baritone voice, Murphy is a great showman who delivers lyrics with great sensitivity, but also has a great sense of humor and fun. He is a master of the hip and be-bop-style vocal, and has done projects featuring the works of Jack Kerouac, Ivan Lins, and Eddie Jefferson, among others. His most current recording is Song For The Geese available on Muse Records.

Pianist Larry Dunlap will accompany Murphy.

Richie Cole & Giacomo Gates

Richie Cole returns to The Jazz Store to play his alto saxophone in his energetic, hard-swinging style. He is known for his playing with Phil Woods, Eddie Jefferson, and the Manhattan Transfer, and his latest CD features the music from "West Side Story." Phil Elwood sang Giacomo Gates' praises in the S. F. Chronicle recently, saying "He's not only a master at singing inventive be-bop lines and lyrics, but of straight-ahead ballads as well. Like his idol, the late Eddie Jefferson, he's always got a touch of humor in his voice, and he swings." Sparks will fly when Cole and Gates meet up, so don't miss the fun. They will be accompanied by the Bob Phillips Trio.

His current recording, Intercambio, features Damien with Ricardo Peixoto, Harvey Weinapple, and Josh Workman.

Kitty Margolis

Kitty Margolis will perform at The Jazz Store after a wonderful show here last year. She has great taste in her choice of music, and is a captivating entertainer. Her dazzling style and exuberant, inventive approach to music is equally to her mastery of improvisation and strong vocal abilities. Her latest Mad-Kat Records release, Straight Up With A Twist, has garnered high praise in the jazz press. Celebrate the Christmas season in a big way with Kitty Margolis!

Carmel Performing Arts Festival pulling out of '97 deficit with this year's receipts

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

FOLLOWING AN inaugural 1997 Carmel Performing Arts Festival shortfall in receipts which left the festival in the hole, income from the 1998 event finds the festival producers able to pay off "a lion's share" of the deficit.

Last year's shortfall was in "the $20,000 to $30,000 range — nearer $30,000," said Robin McKee, producing artistic director.

"We're going into next year without the huge debt over our heads. In 1999 we'll be showing a real profit and building," McKee told The Pine Cone this week.

This year's festival, shortened from 1997's three weeks to two and a half weeks, drew a total audience count of 8,000 — 3,000 more than the previous year.

"This year we attracted more people in the 20 to 40 age group, as opposed to older people," McKee said. "The mix of performances was more balanced this year and appealed to more kinds of people: Things like the World Music Festival, which played not only at the outdoor Forest Theater, but indoors at Sunset Theater. As the festival progressed, the audiences got bigger. Performances on the final Saturday and Sunday of the festival were the largest due to word of mouth from those who had been to earlier performances."

Cross-over audiences

McKee continued, "We saw 'classical people' crossing over to bluegrass; audiences very invested in the Bach Festival who perhaps hadn't previously seen what the Carmel Ballet Company is doing; and we saw audiences trying something from local regional groups this year."

McKee said that Bach Festival tenors Sanford Sylvan and David Gordon performed together in the CPA Festival last year, "and this year Gordon came back on his own to play his guitar. The McLaine Brothers' bluegrass band and David may do something together in the future," she said. "As we introduced artist to artist, these discussions began to happen — an open sharing of art."

Such collaboration between artists and organizations has been what McKee calls a "unique byproduct of the festival that seeks to support and nurture performing arts endeavors in Monterey County, rather than duplicate them," she said.

The third annual CPAF is planned for Oct. 1-17, 1999.

Carmel Bach Festival veteran David Gordon returned for a solo act.

Believe it or not — The McLaine Brothers bluegrass band.

Xtet chamber group performs new music Tuesday at Sunset

XTET, a chamber ensemble of Los Angeles-based musicians, appears at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 24 in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

The program is an offering of Chamber Music Monterey Bay.

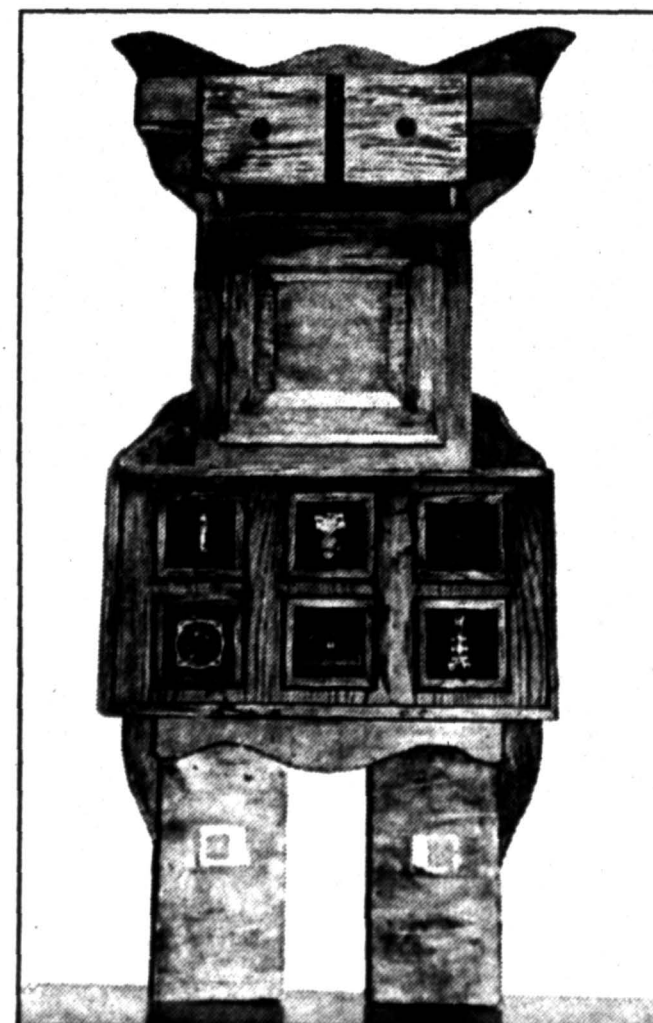

Founded in 1986, Xtet is composed of classical musicians who grew up steeped in jazz, rock and rhythmically driven forms of music. Its players all have other jobs; they play with the L.A. Philharmonic, the L.A. Opera Orchestra, L.A. Chamber Orchestra. Several are session players for movie scores and others teach at CalArts and USC. They play strings, winds, percussion, harp and piano.

The performers seek to explore and expand the domain of chamber music. As for their name, "X" equals a mathematical variable between two and 12, and is shorthand for the fluidity sought by the ensemble.

Xtet is essentially a new music ensemble, but it also ventures into early modernism and makes occasional forays into the 19th century.

Tickets for Tuesday's performance are $18, $7 for students who show I.D.

Emergency repair work halted by two 'stop work' orders

By TAMARA GRIPPI

EIGHT MONTHS after a raging flood in Pescadero Canyon eroded the steep canyon walls to within a few feet of their home — and with another winter looming — Carl and Jane Panattoni finally began work last month on a new retaining wall to protect their landmark home at the north end of Carmel Beach.

Now, the work has been suddenly halted after stop work orders were issued by both the California Coastal Commission and the City of Carmel. Work was started without the right permits, both agencies say.

A large excavator sits idle at the foot of Pescadero Canyon after the City of Carmel and the California Coastal Commission issued 'stop work' orders. The work was to protect the landmark home that sits above the canyon from erosion damage.

The couple received approval for their repair plan from the Carmel Planning Commission September 30. Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth also granted them an emergency exemption from the lengthy California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) review.

However, the planning commission approval was contingent upon several conditions, which included obtaining a city building permit and a permit from the coastal commission, and a stipulation that the city would have final say about whether an access road could be built in the canyon, according to Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth.

While the coastal commission staff was inspecting a Pebble Beach Co. beach stabilization project underway on the opposite side of the canyon November 6, the staff discovered that "to our astonishment, right on the other side of the property line, this thing was going ahead with no permission from us at all," said Lee Otter, district chief planner.

Otter said he was disturbed that the Panattoni's contractors had bulldozed through the canyon and through a lagoon that forms where the canyon meets the beach, had installed a plastic culvert and dug a pit on the beach.

"The entire Pescadero Creek riparian wetland area has been destroyed at the site," Otter wrote in his letter to the Panattonis.

However, the Panattonis' project engineer, John Kasunich, said that bringing bulldozers into the canyon were a necessary part of the project. "There's no other way

Regional park district buys land to stop Hatton freeway

By PAUL MILLER

WITH THE close of escrow on Nov. 19, the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District became the owner of 34 acres of hilly, undeveloped land at the North end of Hatton Canyon. The land had been owned by the High Meadows Homeowners Association, which sold it for $66,000.

"The board approved the purchase of the land as part of a plan to create a Hatton Canyon Regional Park," said Joe Donofrio, park district manager.

Caltrans wants five of the 34 acres for the Hatton Canyon Scenic Highway, and is planning to take them by eminent domain. Now, Caltrans will have to face lawyers hired by the well-funded park board before it can take over the land it says it needs to begin construction of the long-controversial freeway.

Caltrans had offered the High Meadows Homeowners' Association $22,500 for just five acres (which are adjacent to the 100+ acres the state already owns) so it can "build the redesigned freeway, get it out of the bottom of the canyon, minimize the impacts to the woodland oaks and wetlands, and make it a curvier, more rural-looking road," according to Caltrans' project manager José Poncé.

The Homeowners' board of directors doesn't want a freeway in the canyon, Optional mail delivery?

Dear Editor:

I would like to support the J. Zischke letter of Oct. 9 regarding "optional home mail delivery."

For the last eight years I have gone to the Carmel-by-the-Sea post office daily and each year the traffic and parking situation has become more difficult because of more people, cars, and trucks.

Optional mail delivery would, I believe, take a large percentage of one-stop vehicles out of the downtown area and help clear our crowded streets.

It is not our intent to suggest change for the sake of change; but, if we want to maintain the charm of our city we have to alleviate congestion and optional home delivery would help solve some of this problem.

I wish The Pine Cone would do a lead article on this subject, i.e., history, traditions, past reviews by the electorate, so that the community can intelligently and calmly review the subject of home mail delivery.

Thomas P. Conmy, Carmel

Hatton Canyon model

Dear Editor:

First of all, I want to thank Ken White for working so hard to get Caltrans to finally give the people of Carmel and Pebble Beach an adequate opportunity to view the model of the Hatton Canyon Freeway.

I spent quite a bit of time looking the thing over the other day, and it seemed to me that the road would do wonders for the streets of Carmel, taking through traffic away and eliminating a lot of cars that cut through town on their way to The Crossroads, Barnyard, etcetera.

Why aren't more people in town in favor of this road? Or are we being duped by the government and the news media to think that everyone is against it?

Also, has any progress been made in catching the person who sent the threatening letters to freeway proponents?

Warren Gilmore, Pebble Beach

'Starving artists'

Dear Editor:

Regarding "Coffee Break" by Beverly Borgman [Nov 16], "I don't know anything about art, but . . ." You should have left it at that Ms. Borgman — you don't know anything about art — at best fine art. By slamming one of the world's most revered artists ever as a failed artist because he never made any money during his life, belittling his incredible masterpieces, you do injustice not only to a great artist but to all hardworking artists today who strive to create original and truthful art — not for the sake of making money, but because true artistic expression is what the true artist must try to accomplish. Fine art was never dependent upon making money and you are doing not only Mr. Van Gogh but all real artists a great disservice by assuming that art equals money. How you can compare Media Arts, aka Thomas Kinkade, to the likes of Van Gogh or any of the true hardworking failed artists as you call the rest of us because many of us have not made money off slick artistic illustrations that are being peddled as fine art is very sad

You do many of the fine artists that live and work here a real injustice when you equate being an artist with making money. It is the same mentality that wishes to destroy the likes of Hatton Canyon because a few must spend an extra 10 minutes in traffic. I am no writer and I apologize for my poor writing skill but I do know about fine art and I do feel that you owe Van Gogh and all us struggling artists an apology.

--A failed artist

we're going to be able to build anything down there whether temporary or permanent."

In order to provide a stable base for the wall, Kasunich said the contractors would have to dig out six foot of loose "alluvions" in order to reach the bedrock and provide a stable base for the retaining wall.

In addition, Kasunich said, the Panattoni's biologist has been monitoring all of the work in the canyon and will put together a plan for restoring the vegetation. However, Roseth said that the biological consultant's assessment needed to be reviewed and OK'd by the city before the work could begin.

Kasunich blamed himself for not following through the permit process. "We dropped the ball and that's not his (Panattoni's) fault," he said. "That's our fault."

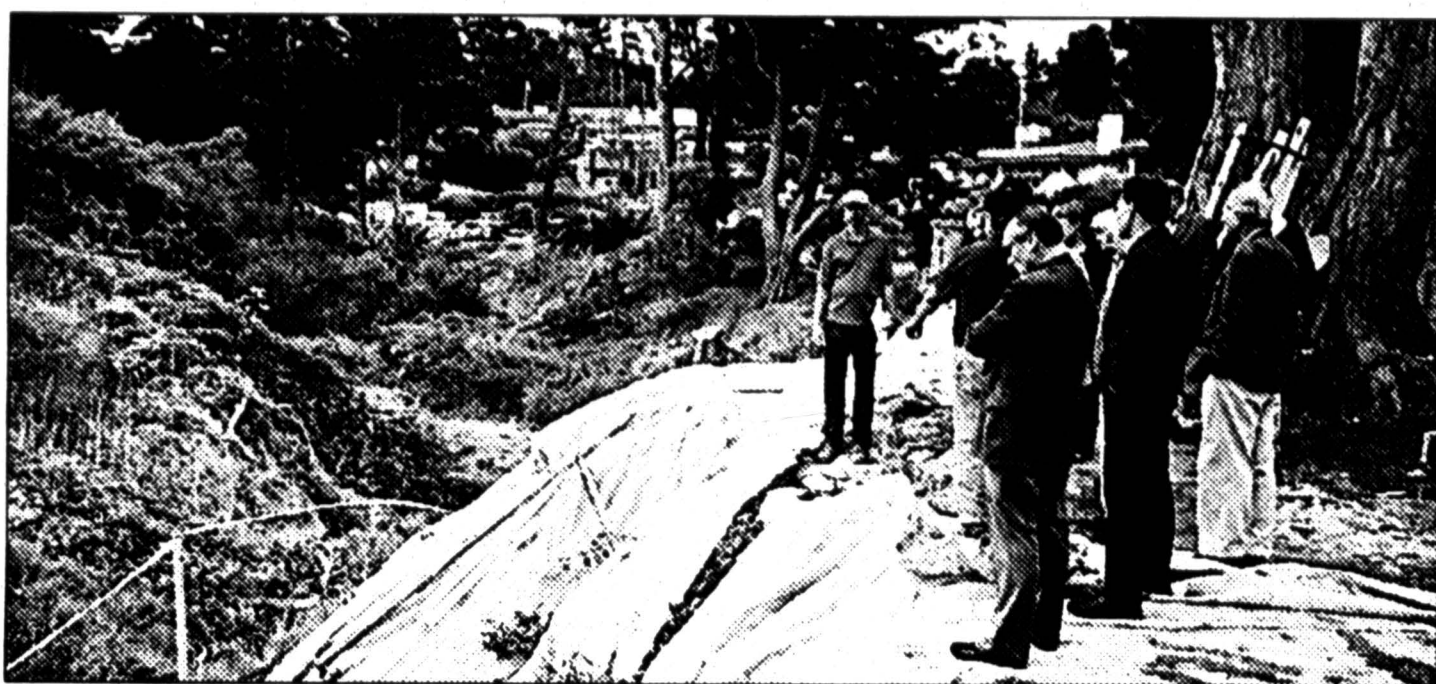

Kasunich said he had already talked to Otter and was applying for an emergency permit along with his regular permit.

"We're trying to back on track legitimately and get this thing done right," he said.

Roseth and Otter both said that they were willing to work with the Panattonis to put together a plan to save the landmark home from imminent danger.

"If you've got an immediate threat and there's something that can be done quickly, it's in everyone's interest that the coastal staff and this department authorize this," Roseth said.

The Panattonis have told The Pine Cone that they are extremely worried that they could lose part of their home if the bluff's erosion continues this winter.

Planning officials toured the Panattoni property in September before approving the repair plan.

CRA beach clean-up Saturday

THE MONTHLY clean-up of Carmel Beach by the Carmel Residents Association will take place Nov. 21. Volunteers should bring their own gloves and meet at the foot of Ocean Avenue beginning at 10 a.m.

As usual, coffee will be donated by Caffe Cardinale and pastries by the Carmel Baking Company.

PARK BOARD

undulating or otherwise, so the board wants to make it as difficult as possible for the state to condemn and buy the land. Now it has a powerful ally in the Regional Parks District.

Last January 15, The California Transportation Commission heard arguments from both Caltrans and the parks district on whether to approve a "Resolution of Necessity" which allows Caltrans to pursue condemnation of the five acres owned by High Meadows Homeowners Association.

That resolution, which was approved 7-1, will have to be approved again after the Hatton Canyon EIR is finalized.

Caltrans will then have to go to court to force the park district to sell the five acres.

A public hearing on the EIR is set for Nov. 24 at 4 p.m. at Carmel Middle School.
